

of Wonder

Full Look PRADA

Words JELLA HAASE

The universe has called and said _

Down in the North,
Mimmy writes an angry poem.

Up in the South, I wonder to heaven

And Hannah Arendt asks, if it was possible that...

And whispers with mischievousness in the neck of the impudent desire to live even if the world situation is crappy and Thomas Brasch lays an eternal fire and speaks ravingly in all calmness and in politeness thoughtfully:
roast, roast forever, in eternity down

And he asks

how is it possible?

And I think arrived at the top is as below, only reversed and in heaven it says, it happened.

I'm so angry, pull yourselves together because you can't just throw everything away, what's wrong with you, what do you think you're doing, what gives you the right to be such an asshole –

And in the coincidence of the moment we met and the whole universe settled down on me –

A BETTER MISTAKE

Who legitimizes your privileges, where do you get your pride from,
were you born with it or were you just born in the right country to spit in other people's faces,

And I think, is it possible to feel everything and forget everything next to you

When will the royal pretense finally come to an end, when will you be the ones to suffer ...

I feel everything that was, everything that is and everything that will be.

I don't want to finish your food, I don't want to compensate for your energy consumption,

And I sense everything, like a child who falls for the first time and has never known anything, the light and the heavy and the abolition of the categorical imperative

Is it reality or is it made up and is it possible that at the same time nothing can be more beautiful and nothing more cruel than the contradiction of this question?
